

Welcome to the Kavli Neuro Futures Slack Workspace

Updated 12/21/20

We're happy you are here! This document is intended to help you get started in our Kavli Neuro Futures Community by highlighting some key links and resources. If you have any questions, please get in touch with Kavli Science Program Officer Stephanie Albin (salbin@kavlifoundation.org), or direct messaging to Stephanie on Slack.

I. Slack

Slack is where our Neuroscience Kavli Institute community members connect, and where we share resources and opportunities. We welcome anyone affiliated with our neuroscience Kavli Institutes in Neuroscience, especially the early-career scientists. We also welcome alumni to use this space as a way to keep in touch with the Kavli Community.

If Slack is new to you, please check out this quick start guide.

DEFAULT CHANNELS

All new members are automatically added to:

#alumni – This channel is for Kavli Institute alumni to share where they have moved on to!

#ask-me-anything – This channel is for posting suggestions and where we will be hosting a monthly “Ask Me Anything” session.

#conferences – This is the channel where we welcome posts about upcoming neuro-related meetings, workshops, and conferences.

#general

#introduce-yourself

#jobs

#professional-development

OPTIONAL CHANNELS

There are a growing number of optional channels. You can browse these by clicking on the channels title in the left-hand sidebar of Slack (see image, right). You're welcome to join and public channel within the workspace, or suggest new channels.

#random – Non-work banter and water cooler conversation.

II. Policies and guides

You can find The Kavli Foundation's code of conduct on our website here. Everything we do is guided by our core values and they underpin our code of conduct.
